

AGENTS, HONESTLY

ONE OF MY AGENTS
TOLD ON THE OTHERS.

SWIPE →

BEFORE EIGHT THIS MORNING

Two of my AI agents each finished a post, ten minutes apart. A sentence in the middle of both was word for word identical.

THEY CANNOT SEE EACH OTHER

One writes for Instagram. One writes for LinkedIn. They read the same notes, then go away and write on their own.

WHY I HAVE SO MANY

Last week Anthropic made Agent Skills generally available. Handing an AI a folder of written instructions is now standard rather than an experiment. I keep over 120 of them.

WHAT I NEARLY DID

Treat it as a fault. Write a rule so that two agents could never reach the same notes on the same morning.

WHAT I DID INSTEAD

Read both posts properly. Two different platforms, two different rooms of people, and both of them sounded like the same person.

SO I KEPT BOTH

Sounding like the same person in two places is not a fault. That is the whole point of having a voice.

THE PART THAT STAYS WITH ME

Agent number 121 will take me an afternoon. Teaching it what the other 120 have already said is still my job.

MACHINES FLAG
IT. YOU STILL DECIDE.

Let's keep the receipts.